Cambridge College Almost Perfect Pass Rate for MTEL

CAMBRIDGE— Cambridge College students are clearly making the grade as the College continues to excel in educating Massachusetts teachers. The Massachusetts Tests for Educator Licensure (MTEL) Annual Institution Report 2005-2006 recently reported the pass rates of Cambridge College Teacher Preparation program graduates as 99%. During the 2005-2006 Academic Year, 150 students participated in the program and of those who took the MTEL, 141 out of 142 passed.

“The faculty members in the school of education have worked hard over the last year to provide support to our graduating students so that they have a better opportunity to pass the MTEL,” said Dr. Anthony DeMatteo, Dean of the School of Education at Cambridge College. “As you can see from our data, I am very pleased that we are showing a success in this endeavor.”

One hundred percent of Cambridge College students passed when testing in academic content areas of General Science, Middle School Mathematics and Health Education. Students also passed 100% of the time when taking the General Curriculum test, and 99% passed the Communication and Literacy Test and the Foundations of Reading test.

Founded in 1971, Cambridge College is a private, non-profit institution dedicated to providing academically excellent, time-efficient, and cost-effective higher education for a diverse population of working adults for whom those opportunities may have been limited or denied.
