Accreditation and Authorization

Regional Accreditation

Cambridge College is accredited by the New England Commission of Higher Education (formerly the Commission on Institutions of Higher Education of the New England Association of Schools and Colleges, Inc.).

Accreditation of an institution of higher education by the Commission indicates that it meets or exceeds criteria for the assessment of institutional quality periodically applied through a peer review process. An accredited college or university is one which has available the necessary resources to achieve its stated purposes through appropriate educational programs, is substantially doing so, and gives reasonable evidence that it will continue to do so in the foreseeable future. Institutional integrity is also addressed through accreditation.

Accreditation by the Commission is not partial but applies to the institution as a whole. As such, it is not a guarantee of every course or program offered, or the competence of individual graduates. Rather, it provides reasonable assurance about the quality of opportunities available to students who attend the institution.

Inquiries regarding the accreditation status by the Commission should be directed to the administrative staff of the institution. Individuals may also contact:

President
Cambridge College was established in 1971 by a group of educators as the Institute of Open Education, an innovative graduate program offering advanced degrees to teachers and non-traditional adult learners, such as students older than the typical first-time college student, including many with previous college experience but no credential. The founding mission shaped the early institution and continues to guide the College today: To provide academically excellent, time-efficient, and cost-effective higher education for a diverse population of working adults for whom those opportunities may have been limited or denied. The mission reflected the essence of Cambridge College’s teaching and learning model, characterized by open admission with student-centered, career-oriented academic instruction.

Today, Cambridge College remains a pioneer in higher education focused solely on adult learners. We offer undergraduate and graduate programs tailored to the needs of adult students focused on advancing their careers to meet the demands of tomorrow’s workforce. As a fully accredited private non-profit institution with four schools—the School of Arts & Sciences, School of Education & Counseling, School of Business & Technology, and the recently acquired New England Institute of Business, now called Cambridge College Global—Cambridge College was created to advance the lives and careers of adult learners. Classes are offered across flexible schedules and modalities in five locations (Boston, Lawrence, Springfield, MA; Rancho Cucamonga, California; and San Juan, Puerto Rico) and 100% online through CCG.

For 53 years, the College has maintained its commitment to open enrollment and continues to prioritize the needs of the diverse, working adult students it has always served, who now number over 39,000 alumni.

Mission
To provide academically excellent, time-efficient, and cost-effective higher education for a diverse population of working adults for whom those opportunities may have been limited or denied.

Values
Cambridge College is a responsive learning community, where adult learners can find ways to make the personal and professional changes they need to achieve their goals. Learning at Cambridge College takes place in an atmosphere of true diversity, where students support each other in a collaborative learning process that respects their needs and values along with their prior learning and life experiences. The College’s innovative adult-centered learning model links theory and practice, helping students to acquire the academic credentials they seek, enrich their lives and careers, and become leaders in their communities.

History
In 1971, a small group of educators created an educational institution, now known as Cambridge College, whose primary mission was to provide educational opportunities and degree attainment for working adults who did not have ready access to higher education. The art and science of helping adults learn became the foundation of education philosophy at the institution. By blending theory and practice in a developmental and participatory approach, this group of educators developed “the teaching/learning model” specifically for adult learning and to benefit those who may not have had opportunities for a college education.

The College was first known as The Institute of Open Education within Newton College of the Sacred Heart, and later became part of the Antioch University Network. In 1981, it became an independent, private non-profit institution with the new name of Cambridge College. A Master of Education was the initial degree program launched at the graduate level; it successfully supplied the growing need for teachers, especially in urban settings. The mission and philosophy of the College drew the attention of students from businesses, non-profit and social service agencies, and other professions. As this learning community grew, the College expanded to offer a broad range of academic programs, including the Master of Business Administration, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, and Certificate of Advanced Graduate Studies.
Today, Cambridge College also serves the educational needs of students outside of its main campus location in Boston, Massachusetts. The College has regional locations in Springfield and Lawrence, Massachusetts, and California and Puerto Rico. The College aspires to be a visionary organization and learning community for its constituents. Through the dynamic learning processes that are the foundations of our educational model, and our dedication to our mission, we believe we are serving and transforming the lives of adult learners across the national landscape.

On March 13, 2020, Cambridge College acquired the assets of the New England Institute of Business following the unanimous votes of each institution’s boards of trustees. This momentous decision brought together two institutions with a combined 150 years serving adult learners pursuing meaningful careers.

Distinctive Teaching/Learning Model

The College’s innovative adult-centered learning model links theory and practice, helping students acquire the academic credentials they seek, enrich their lives and careers, and become leaders in their communities. This adult learning model has proven resilient and adaptable to new content areas and various learning formats throughout the College’s history. Cambridge College is a learning community where adult learners experience educational practices that honor and empower them. The College believes that everyone can learn regardless of age, life history, current circumstances, or past academic experience. Each student’s uniqueness, capabilities and experiences are valued in the classroom communities. Our programs develop and enhance skills, competencies, attitudes, values and habits of mind, all enabling our students to competently meet personal needs and professional challenges.

Our coursework is designed to promote collaborative learning, support the use of technology, and increase content expertise. The real-world diversity of our classrooms provides rich opportunities for examining socially constructed learning in individual research projects and team-based assignments. The majority of our faculty are experienced professionals who bring both academic and professional perspectives to the classroom, thus allowing our students to study current trends in the field. Faculty members and program chairs work with students to build the competencies needed for academic and career success.

High Quality and Engaging Student-Faculty Relationship

According to the Council for Adult and Experiential Learning, reducing barriers for adult students means recreating the roles of faculty to be more facilitators of student learning and less lecturers, and to instill in them the freedom to learn from students without professional embarrassment. By recognizing adult learners as potential co-creators of knowledge and connecting their real life experience to academic theory, students will be able to continually enrich and contribute to their learning process and feel motivated to persist in their educational pursuits.

At Cambridge College, many of our students report that the dynamic learning process has transformed their professional and personal lives. The distinctiveness and efficiency of this model has been long substantiated by our student population; our students regularly praise the quality of the relationships they enjoy with the faculty and highlight it as one of the defining and unique characteristics of a Cambridge College education. Our alumni re-engage with Cambridge College because they see the College not only as an inspiring institution where they acquired their priceless education but also as a community of genuinely caring individuals who continue to believe in, nurture, and admire their resiliency, abilities, and well-deserved accomplishments.
